RINALDO L. CUMMINGS

Rinaldo L. Cummings, well known business man and a writer on political issues of the day and Grange topics, was found dead in his bed Friday morning. Death doubtless came while sleeping. Mr. Cummings had been suffering from bad heart attacks for some time.

He was born in Woodstock Jan. 30, 1865, the son of Allen Tewksbury and Eliza Bryant Cummings. He was a member of a family of seven children, one of whom, Arthur Cummings of Portland survives. He married Flora Jenkins of Norway.

Surviving are three children, Carroll and Alanson of West Paris and Mrs. Edna Bell of Merced, Cal., six grandchildren and several nieces and nephews. A nephew, Roy Cummings, who is an invalid, lived with Mr. Cummings.

Mr. Cummings was one of the prominent men in the apple industry and shipped many carloads, which he purchased or raised, across the water—handling many hundreds of barrels yearly. In early life he purchased the Adoniram Curtis farm in Woodstock which he operated until his death.

At one time he moved to South Paris and was engaged in developing the speed of fast horses which he owned for the race course. About ten years ago the house on his farm was burned and he moved to the Cummings Building which he built and where he operated a garage with his sons, Carroll and Alanson, the latter coming from California where he has lived.

Mr. Cummings was also tremendously interested in state and national politics, writing many articles for the newspapers and speaking often in Granges on the topics of public interest. His interest is evidenced in that he was scheduled to speak at Mechanic Falls Grange Saturday night.

Mr. Cummings was a member of several organizations and was always ready to speak whenever called upon. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge, South Paris;—Continued on Page Eight—

MISS FANNIE SANBORN

Miss Fannie Sanborn passed away at her home in Skillingston Monday afternoon. She was born 62 years ago, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Sanborn. Surviving are one sister, Mrs. Ada Powers of Portland, and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services are held this afternoon at two o'clock with Rev. L. A. Edwards officiating. Interment in the Skillingston cemetery.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Four birthdays were celebrated at the home of Rev. and Mrs. R. C. Dalzell Wednesday afternoon at a gathering in honor of Mrs. Emma Robertson, Miss Minnie Capen, Miss Minnie Wilson, and Rev. R. C. Dalzell. The event was a complete surprise for each, as they had come on account of the others. The following pleasing program was given:

Song, Washington, "Tis of Thee, All Talk and Presentation to Mrs. Robertson. Mr. Dalzell

Song, Mr. Dalzell

Talk to Miss Capen. Mr. Dalzell

Song, Mr. Dalzell

Talk to Miss Wilson. Mr. Dalzell

Poem, A Birthday Wish, and Talk to Mr. Dalzell, Mrs. Carrie French

Talk, Regime of Washington's Life, Mrs. Alberta Wright

Poem, Mrs. Fannie B. Loveloy

Reading, Miss Ruth Leavenwood

Piano selection, Mrs. Maude Bean

Each birthday guest was presented with a birthday cake, and ice cream and cake were served.

SEVERAL ENTRIES ANNOUNCED FOR TOWN OFFICES

Four Offer Services as Selectmen or Collector—Others Said to be in Field

It is understood that there are several who would serve the town the coming year in various capacities who have not as yet announced their willingness in the public prints. However at the present time we have definite information of two candidates for the board of selectmen and two for the tax collector's position.

Ernest F. Bisbee, who last week made his announcement of running for the first selectman berth, is to say the least well and favorably known to the majority of Bethel voters. Although a native of Newry, he has for many years lived in Bethel, graduating from Gould Academy, and working in the store of Ceylon Rowe & Son for several years before joining the L. W. Ramsell Co., in which concern he is still interested. For several years he has been first assessor of Bethel Village Corporation and has served with thoroughness and distinction in that capacity.

GIRL RESERVES PLAY WELL PRESENTED

"Don't Count Your Chickens," a three-act comedy, was presented by the Girl Reserves of Gould Academy, on Thursday evening, Feb. 15, in the William Bingham Gymnasium under the able direction of Miss Ruth Leavenwood, head of the Department of Dramatics and Music. The entire cast, headed by Miss Blanche Bowers (Marjorie Berry) and her amusing colored maid, Pansy Peters (Frances Adams), gave excellent performances.

The program follows:

DON'T COUNT YOUR CHICKENS

Scene: The living room of Miss Blanche Bowers.

Time: Act 1, scene 1. An afternoon in June. Scene 2, Three hours later. Act 2. The next afternoon. Act 3. Two months later.

Especially noteworthy was the excellent manner in which the school orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Antonio E. Mainente, played some of the more difficult selections from the field of the classics. Mr. Mainente, working for the most part with pupils from the grades and in the early years of high school, has developed an orchestra in Bethel not only high in musical ability but capable of beautifully portraying worthwhile musical compositions.

A. H. Rums and John Bisbee of Bryant Pond were business visitors in town Monday.

VAN STACK TELLS OXFORD PEDAGOGUES OF LIFE IN JUNGLES OF AFRICA

The Oxford County Schoolmasters' Association held its February meeting Wednesday, Feb. 14th, at Stephens High School, Rumford, with one of the largest gatherings in the history of the association. Supper was served under the auspices of the Stephens High School domestic science department in the high school cafeteria, following which a short business meeting was held. It was voted to hold the County Prize Speaking Contest at Canton, April 27, instead of May 4, the date previously set. The next meeting will be held at Norway on March 14, to which Androscoggin County schoolmasters are invited.

Following the business meeting the members adjourned to the auditorium in an open meeting which opened with several selections by Stephens High School Band under the direction of Harry J. Cohen. Rev. Frederick Young next introduced Harry C. Van Stack, Officer of the Australian Convict Ship "Success." Mr. Van Stack, the son of Dutch missionaries, was born in the interior of Transvaal where he spent the first twenty years of his life, and he gave a very interesting account of some of his adventurous experiences in the jungles of Africa. Following Mr. Van Stack's address, Supt. Redding, president of the association, introduced the Hon. Donald Partridge of Norway who spoke briefly of the importance of maintaining high educational standards.

SOMETHING NEW AMATEUR NIGHT

A unique entertainment, sponsored by the Ladies' Club of the Congregational Parish, Odeon Hall, March 6, 1934.

Watch for further announcement next week.

ANDOVER HIGH HERE SATURDAY

Andover with their new snow plow should be able to "dig" themselves out enough to come here Saturday to play the "B" Squad and the Girls' Varsity.

The girls played their best game of the season last Friday when they conquered the strong Alumni sextette. The same line-up will again start and it should be an interesting game.

Those who saw the "B" Squad play Andover last year will not wish to miss it as it was close and exciting during the entire contest.

The girls' game will start at seven o'clock and the admission for those not holding season tickets will be twenty-five cents and ten cents.

FOOTLIGHT PLAY PLEASES AUDIENCE

"The Yellow Shadow" Success at Odeon Hall Tuesday Evening

A good sized and very enthusiastic audience braved the storm Tuesday evening to see the third production of the Bethel Footlight Club, a mystery-comedy, "The Yellow Shadow." From start to finish the play was a grand success.

The scene was laid at Viewcrest Lodge, which had been inherited by Mildred Marvin, played by Doris Lord, who gave unusual ease and naturalness to the part. Her friend, Alice Perkins, was played by Betty Anderson with much grace and charm, and Harold Marshall in the role of Herbert Marvin, the supporting lead, was both clever and convincing. Dr. Hood gave a subtle portrayal of the suave lawyer, Gilbert Wright.

The comedy parts were Sheriff Macklin and J. Steel. The former played by Earle Eldredge, with his accustomed professional skill, and the latter with the humor which is characteristic of Naomi Bean.

Donald Kellogg's histrionic ability was demonstrated fully in his individual interpretation of Jed Travis. Mildred Allen, as Nell Travis, mysterious housekeeper at Viewcrest, gave an outstanding performance. Gwendolyn Stearns as Hazel Wayne, the psychic and emotional type, did an exceptional piece of acting. The part of Wong Song, the Chinese villain, was given by Karl Stearns with comedy and character touches.

Much credit is due Virginia Little, Charles Freeman, Harold Lurvey, Floyd Thurston and Edward Poole for their assistance backstage.

Specialties were varied and colorful. Four Chinese maidens, Dorothy Tucker, Elsie Davis, Doris Lord, and Virginia Little, sang "Sing a Little Low Down Tune," accompanied by Dr. Hood. Phyllis Davis, playing the accordion in costume, was a favorite with the audience. A guitar trio, consisting of Elizabeth Bean, Annie Nutting, and Eva Chapman, rendered Hawaiian music. A vocal selection from "The Desert Song," by Richard Young was appreciated. He was accompanied by Erma Young, who also furnished music with her Blue Bird Orchestra.

An estimated damage of $15,000 was caused by fire at Ellsworth Friday when a three story brick building in the business district was burned.

If Mothers Only Knew

Thousands of Children Suffer from Worms, and Their Mothers do not know what the trouble is.

Signs of Worms are: Constipation, deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, offensive breath, hard and full stomach with pains, pale face, eyes heavy, short dry cough, grinding of the teeth, etc.

Mrs. E. W. Stephan, 31 Kennerma Road, Dorchester, Mass., wrote: "My little girl's freedom from children's diseases, colds, constipation, etc., I attribute in a large measure to the use of Dr. True's Elixir."

Dr. True's Elixir Laxative Worm Expeller

A pure herb medicine, not a harsh stimulant; natural relief from constipation. Successfully Used for 81 Years

"Every Winter Had Terrible Colds"

Nurse's Grateful Letter

Mohawk, N. Y., Oct. 9. "I want to thank you for the wonderful cough and cold medicine Buckley's Mixture. I bought the first bottle last winter for the old gentleman whom I am taking care of and he has had every winter and fall terrible colds. The first dose helped and the third dose cold was gone. It does such quick work. Mrs. C. Davis."

Don't take chances. The most stubborn, racking cough swiftly yields to the powerful influence of Buckley's Mixture (triple strength) largest selling medicine for coughs, colds and bronchitis in Canada. Get a 45c bottle at W. E. Bosserman, Druggist, or any Drug Store. Safe and guaranteed always.

WEST PARIS SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASSES HOLD PARTIES

Mrs. H. W. Chapman, Mrs. Lyndall Farr, Mrs. Myrtle Bonney, entertained their Sunday School Classes of the Universalist Sunday School at delightful valentine parties. Ralph Abbott, assistant teacher of R. E. Chases' boys class recently gave a happy evening party for the boys and will entertain at a Washington party this week. The usual valentine party held yearly at the Universalist Sunday School was omitted on account of the cold weather.

John Walter Small was given a party, Feb. 13, in honor of his second birthday, at the home of his grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. Randal Herrick.

Refreshments of ice cream, fancy cookies, orangeade, and the birthday cake were served. Several nice gifts were received.

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

February 18—Sunday—So nice and warm today. I have enjoyed sitting out on the piazza in the sunshine. The thermometer registers 50 degrees above zero.

Mrs. Bessie Billings, telephone operator on the South Woodstock and Bryant Pond line, has been very sick the past week, confined to her bed from the effects of serious development of a bad cold.

The Grange school of instruction held at South Paris Feb. 14 was well patronized. Lester and Linwood Felt, Mrs. Annie Davis and G. W. Q. Perham were in attendance. Franklin Grange officers formally opened the meeting in a very creditable manner.

The bean supper for the benefit of the S. D. A. Church School, held at Bernald Thurlow's Thursday evening, Feb. 15, was attended by many. Several came from Pigeon Hill for the occasion.

Francis Jackson, who for some time worked at Davis homestead, was a visitor there Sunday, Feb. 18, accompanied by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith of camp Chady Nook at the foot of Perham Mountain.

Very sorry to hear that Ronello Davis of the old Chase school district is ill and confined to the house. His many friends through town are hoping that he soon makes a complete recovery.

Mrs. Mary Felt is doing a lot of knitting this winter, knitting mittens, stockings and leggins, for which a ready sale is found among satisfied customers.

Theodore Roberts spent the day Sunday at Bryant Pond, a guest of his father, Joseph Roberts.

Town meeting is near at hand. I hope that every candidate for office will come out in the open and announce his aspirations. Let everyone feeling worthy of the position he seeks stand undaunted in the firing line, and though he may fail, let the public know he was unafraid to stand the ordeal of either victory or defeat.

Sunday many from South Woodstock attended the funeral services held for Rinaldo L. Cummings of West Paris. Mr. Cummings was found asleep in death early Friday morning, Feb. 16, the news of which came as a shock to his many, many friends. Mr. Cummings was a Woodstock man, born Jan. 30, 1865, son of Allen Tewksbury and Eliza Bryant Cummings.

Mr. Cummings, as a schoolboy, attended the Nute School here at South Woodstock. As an older boy he was remembered by his kindness to the younger boys in school. Mr. Cummings was greatly interested in politics, both State and national. He was a man of stern convictions, of far reaching conclusions. As a statistician he had no equal. Mr. Cummings was known as Apple King of New England, growing, buying and selling apples. As an honored member of the South Paris Masonic Lodge, Knights of Pythias of South Paris, West Paris Grange, and West Paris First Universalist church, he was interested in fraternal and religious affairs. To mourn the departed are a daughter, two sons, six grandchildren, an inestimable friends and acquaintances.

Colonial Shipbuilding

Dates Back to Year 1607
Shipbuilding in the Colonies began in 1607, with the construction of the 30-ton pinnace named Virginia, built by the Poplum colony, which settled on the coast of Maine years before the Mayflower started for American shores; followed by the Onrust, the first vessel built by the Dutch on the Hudson in 1614. Jamestown had small crafts in 1607, and the year 1635 saw six ships built by the Pilgrims for coast-trade with the Indians, with which they launched in 1611. In years after the Restoration act of 1651 every American port from Portland to Charleston was a thriving avenue of masts; and when Charles I was defeated by Cromwell, Massachusetts had four shipyards. In 1608 the flourishing world commerce of the Colonies began, and with the dawn of the eighteenth century the fastest and most beautiful ships driven by wind were engaged in commerce beyond the Cape of Good Hope, through labyrinthine of India archipelagos, bound for the "China trade." In one year Newburyport saw 41 ships and 500 seamen sail for the Orient, and Massachusetts in 1770 had one sailing vessel of colossal importance that helped lay the cornerstone of the American nation.

LOCKE MILLS

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Jason Bennett was the scene of a very pleasant occasion on Saturday evening, Feb. 17, when a surprise party was given their daughter, Miss Barbara in honor of her seventeenth birthday. All decorations, games and stunts were in keeping of St. Valentine's. Refreshments of ice cream and birthday cakes were served. Miss Bennett received many nice gifts. At a late hour all departed for home, wishing her many happy returns of the day. Those present were Eunice Salls, Sylvie Lapham, Louise Swan, Ruth Hay, Naomi Heald, Cora Crockett, Florence Rand, Keith Ring, Rodney Cross, Reginald Ford, George Norton, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bennett, and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Jason Bennett.

Quite a number from here attended Eastern Star Installation at Bryant Pond Wednesday evening.

On Monday evening, Feb. 19, 30 ladies gave Mrs. Florence Rand a surprise party in honor of her birthday. The evening was pleasantly passed doing various kinds of games and stunts, after which refreshments of sandwiches, cake, coffee and tea were served. As a token of the high esteem which is felt for Mrs. Rand, she was presented with a beaded pocketbook from the ladies of the community, the presentation being made with fitting remarks by Mrs. Marion Tebbets, who with the help of Mrs. Ruth Ring and others made the party a success.

Miss Gladys Salls' Sunday School class gave an entertainment at the Town Hall Friday evening. A social hour was enjoyed after the program.

Church services were held Sunday evening at Union Church. Rev. L. A. Edwards of Bethel was the speaker.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1934.

The fact that the chairman of the Board of Selectmen and the Collector of Taxes have announced that they do not wish to serve longer in those capacities has brought forth perhaps more pre-town meeting talk than for several years past.
It is to be expected and to be desired that citizen's show a lively interest in their town's business.
Since two very efficient officers cannot be secured to continue their work, it behooves us to try and find men who are likely to approach the mark set by the present incumbents.

The voters are fortunate in having, so far, four men who have signified their willingness to accept the responsibilities of town office.
In fairness to their constituency all candidates should take steps to make their plans known to the people before March 5th. It is all too possible for a complete turnover in town administration to occur at a needlessly high cost of educating a new board of town fathers in a town which clings to the method of electing all three selectmen each year.

In making the choice of selectmen let us remember that our town's business is running into large sums of money. A man fit to take charge of municipal affairs should be one who is reasonably successful in handling his own business or who has qualifications which indicate ability, interest and honesty.

There will be only one more issue of the Citizen before town meeting. It will be a step in the right direction if all candidates will make public announcement in next week's issue.

Some time ago the Boy Scouts of America requested the National Board of Fire Underwriters to provide them with material on fire prevention with which to instruct their members. The result was a 65 page book entitled "Firemanship" for Merit Badge examinations. Over 60,000 Boy Scouts use it in preparing for tests each year.

It would be an excellent idea if a national program was started to acquaint children of all ages with the hazards of fire, and how to do away with them. Fire is one of the most serious of problems. It touches every life, every place, every property. It menaces us all. It inflicts taxes, destroys jobs and investments and business opportunities.
Many cases are on record where a single great fire has so devastated a community that many years were required to recover from it.

The schools have, in recent years, almost universally included accident prevention work in their curricula.
They have instructed children in proper conduct on streets and highways, in the home, at play—where-ever carelessness or ignorance might cause an accident. The consequence has been a great reduction in the number of deaths and injuries among children of school age. The same thing should be

A Warm Reception

done in the case of fire. It would be simple, inexpensive and enormously effective. In due course of time, it would create a people who were congenitally awake to fire dangers and how to cope with them.

WASHINGTON AT REST

J. D. I. D.
In the Yankee Privateer, 1852

Rest, here rest beneath the shade,
That love has wreathed around thee,

Wave, gently wave each slender blade
That, in gratitude hath bound thee.

Roll, smoothly roll, Potomac's wave,
Unmixed with voice of sadness, Remember thou bearest to the brave,
The notes of joy and gladness.

Rest, then rest—no monarch's crown,
E'er pressed thy brow of glory;
Thy fame rose not by burning town,

Nor yet by fields of glory,
But by thy wisdom—not thy spear,
Didst thou out-fame Lysander,
And bear the laurel, unwet by a tear,
From the brow of Alexander.

Rest, here rest—a nation's love
Around thy tomb is twining,
And many a prayer ascends above,
For those on thee reclining;
While vernal shades wave o'er thy head,
And shed their bloom upon thee,
Oh, may thy virtues, honored dead,
Fall like sunbeams around thee.

OPPORTUNITY

Said yesterday to tomorrow:
"When I was young like you,
I, too, was fond of boasting
Of all I meant to do,
But while I fell a-dreaming
Along the pleasant way
Before I scarcely knew it,
I found I was today."

"And as today, so quickly
My little courage was run.
I had not time to finish
One-half the things begun.
Would I could try it over,
But I can never go back;
A yesterday forever
I now must be, alas!"

"And so, my good tomorrow,
If you would make a name
That history shall cherish
Upon its roll of fame,
Be all prepared and ready
Your noblest part to play
In those few fleeting hours
When you shall be "today!"

TO LAKE INDIAN
Winifred L. Bryant

Oh, Lake, so snugly nestled 'mid the pines,
As now I see thee, 'neath the sun's decline

White-clad in snow, as pure as angels' wings
You somehow turn my thoughts to brighter things,
And lift my soul to find that strength, that comes From hills that guard thee, raising their lofty domes Heavenward as though to point the way

To God; While at their feet you pray
It seems to guide the wandering soul
To better things, above the worldly toil,

To Faith, to Prayer, to Courage to face their daily strife,
To Hope that is not dashed by the hardships of this life.

Oh, Lake, when hearts are weary,
By sorrow hurt and bowed,
When souls are bruised and anguished

Neath the burden of their load,
Should they only pause a moment
just as the twilight falls,
And gaze upon thy beauty, with no thought of earthly toils,
They would find their spirit lightened,

Pain and joys alike forgot,
And thy glory and Heaven's blended in the same sweet solemn thought.

GOULD LOSES TO ALUMNI BUT WINS FROM MEXICO

Alumni 27-Gould 25

The Alumni, with an all-star line-up pinned a 27-25 defeat on the Gould Academy quintet last Friday. Jay Willard, George Parsons, Hinckley, Jack Parsons, and Quimby proved a combination that passed well, shot brilliantly, and played good defensive ball. With not a great deal of practice they proved to be in better shape than the undergraduates. It was Jack Parsons' sensational shooting that kept the old-timers out in front after the first half. Hinckley and Quimby also added valuable points when needed.

Gould 29-Mexico 25

Gould Academy came from behind in the last period to win from their old rivals in a sensational game that had fans on their toes during the entire four periods. Gould started fast to pick up a 7-2 lead but before the quarter ended Mexico forced in an 8-7 lead. Allen then went in for Bartlett and Hamlin for R. Browne. With this combination the Blue and Gold gained one point to tie the score at 12 all at the half.

In the third period Gloden and Dawson put on a scoring spree that netted nine points to Gould's five. It was in the fourth period that the winners put on a drive that clinched them the victory. Don Stanley scored three neat goals from the floor while Allen dropped in two and a free throw. Hamlin sank a free throw to score the twelfth point of the period and increase the Gould total to 29. Mexico put up a great fight but could only increase their third period total of 21 by four points, and thus the game ended, 29-25.

The Gould Second team got a 12-4 lead on the visitors but had a hard job holding the lead as the game ended 28-25. Berry and Daniels led the scoring with ten and nine points, but Parsons also played exceptionally well for the winners. Gaudette played a fine game for the Plintoe understudies, scoring eleven of his team's points.

Many Historic Markers

Abound in Buckeye State

Ohio probably has more historic markers than any other of the middle western states. During the formative period of the nation this state was the scene of events that affected the whole trend of the country's history.

A few among the many events which have been marked in Ohio were: Indian massacre, ten miles south of Ashland; Dunmore war, monument at Hockingport; battle in War of 1812, ten miles northwest of Wapakoneta; erection of Fort Hamilton, in Hamilton; battle of Platte; second "woman's rights" convention in the world, at Salem; birth of Thomas A. Edison, at Milan; birth of Gen. George A. Custer, New Rumley; establishment of branch of Mormon church, at Kirland; college for the first time in United States admits negroes, at Oberlin; Anthony Wayne defeats Indians in 1794, between Maumee and Waterville; Perry's victory, on South Bass Island; first church and school house in Ohio, at south edge of New Philadelphia; first permanent settlement in Ohio, at Marietta; world's largest alshp construction, at Akron.

Lobsters Do Not Travel

Among the creatures that have been studied with a view to discovering the extent of their migratory tendencies are lobsters, which it has been found rarely wander far from their home area. While making a study of the lobster fisheries in the North sea for the Danish government a number of young lobsters were live-trapped and then returned to the sea after their shells had been notched in a manner to make them recognizable again. Nearby neighborhoods were then watched for the reappearance of the marked lobsters. None were recovered at a distance of more than 15 miles from their point of release, only a few traveled as far as five miles from home and the majority stayed within a mile or two of their native habitat.

Gray Morning of the Year

Terrible things—for those to whom terrible things occur in their lives—happen in the last days of January, writes Ford Madox Ford in the Atlantic Monthly. The heavy drag of winter is then at its most dire, and your courage at its lowest, as if in a long four o'clock in the morning of the year. You seem to pass as if you yourself were invisible in the owl light of the deep streets. . . . Between dog and wolf, they say in Paris. It is a good phrase.

Cowbird Leaves Eggs for

Another Bird to Hatch

The cowbirds are birds of doubtful character, gypsies of the winged world, whose women folk have not the homelike instinct, but thoughtlessly drop their eggs in any little cottage bed they discover in the wildwood, leaving them for foster mothers to hatch and bring up. Like the people of Rom, descendants of Samur, the goldsmith who cast the golden calf for the children of Israel in the wilderness, they wander erratically about the country in spring, associating with cattle in the pastures for the insects their feeding stirs from pasture grass, appearing friendly with English sparrows, but shunned by most native birds.

In shade the cowbirds are not attractive in dress, but when perched on a pasture fence the sun full upon them, they look like ladies and gentlemen. The males are clothed in shiny black, with an iridescent sheen over the upper back. The breast, neck and head are a rich coffee brown. The females are demurely dressed in dark slate-brown above, fading into a lighter shade below, which enables them to steal into the nest of temporarily absent vireos, warblers and sparrows and leave their eggs.

UPTON

H. I. Abbott observed his 76th birthday Tuesday, February 20th in the same house where he was born and where he has lived all his life.

The Farm Bureau Ladies gave an entertainment at the Grange Hall, Friday, February 16. Owing to the cold weather the crowd was not as large as was expected, but they made enough money to send a delegate to Orono for Farm and Home Week the last week in March, for which purpose the entertainment was given.

E. S. Lane was in Rumford on business Monday of this week.

C. B. Henderson was home from Grafton over the week-end.

Martin Colby was home from Errol over the week end.

GORHAM NORMAL SCHOOL

The Gorham Normal School certainly did its share to celebrate St. Valentine's Day. The Poetry Club was the first organization to hold a party. This was done in the Art room Tuesday afternoon, from four to six. There were a large number in attendance among them being Miss Barbara Howard and Miss Sonia Cohen of Rumford, and Miss Myrtle Pratt of Upton. The decorations were in red and white. Refreshments were served consisting of jello and whipped cream, frosted cookies and cocoa. Games and races were played until the close. All the members present declared that it was a most successful party.

The Campfire Group sponsored a dance held in Center Saturday Night. Music was furnished by the Fraternally Orchestra. Miss Myrtle Pratt, who is a member of the Campfire organization was among those who assisted in the decorations, which were in keeping with Valentine's Day.

At a recent meeting of the Library Club Miss Doris Hunt of Norway was elected vice-president of the club. Miss Hunt will hold office for the remainder of the year.

The Outdoor Club and the Athletic Association of the school are sponsoring a Snow Carnival in which all members of the school are invited to participate. This is a new activity in the history of the school, as there have never been Snow Carnivals of this kind before.

The Young Women's Christian Association Cabinet held a meeting recently in which members of the new Junior Cabinet were present. These members were elected by the organization as a whole. Among those who were elected were Ruth Mills of South Paris and Evelyn Moulton of Hiram.

The results of the basketball games last week were as follows: 40-29, lost to Salem; and 35-33, lost to Keene. The next game to be played is with Cheverus on Feb. 21.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Tom Jordan, young New England newspaper reporter, loves with Jessica Poole, his barrister from becoming an acknowledged sultor because of conditions of her father's will that her husband must match her small fortune with his own. To do this, Jordan has a wild hope of wealth from the salvage of a long-sunken French corvette.

CHAPTER II.—To Doctor White Jessica's guardian, Jordan reveals his hope. The doctor is skeptical but for Tom's sake hopeful. Jessica tells them of an encounter she has with an ill-mannered sailor, and Tom's fire is aroused. Two Frenchmen, the comte De Corlay and his son Robert, make their appearance. They claim that an ancestor of theirs commanded the "Fourquet" (which was the name of the corvette) when she sank, and left written record of treasure on board which they assert, as his descendants, is their property. A French sailor, Sebastian, also knows of the treasure, and is seeking it.

CHAPTER III.—After talking the matter over a form of partnership is arranged between Tom and the De Corlays to prosecute the search. Jessica informs her guardian, to his surprise, that she has located the "Fourquet," which is not where it had been supposed, and by making a line fast to the hulk can establish a legal claim to salvage. She plans to do this early next morning. Doctor White, who has some private savings, agrees to accompany her.

CHAPTER IV.—Robert De Corlay warns Tom that Sebastian is clever and unscrupulous. Tom, knowing it is Sebastian who has located the "Fourquet," is more than eager to spot that worthy's plans. He and Robert reach an understanding to work together and divide what treasure may be recovered. Knowing Sebastian will be "on the job" at once they plan to forestall him.

CHAPTER V.—Doctor White makes arrangements for a professional diver to go down to the hulk of the "Fourquet" next day. Early in the morning, in a dense fog, the doctor and Jessica row out to the wreck. The diver fails to appear. Doctor White urges Jessica to postpone her attempt to reach the "Fourquet," but the girl is insistent.

CHAPTER VI

THE water was still and clear, not transparent as in the tropics, but making it possible to see the weed on the rock bottom at a depth of about fifteen feet. Then suddenly they found themselves over a great mass of the skate-heaped algae that Jessica had mentioned. Anchored by the tips of their long, tenuous tails, these sleek brown spatulate fronds were swinging and swaying with undulations of their lateral flukes, scalloped along the edges and seeming to be possessed of a crawling movement.

"Here we are," said Jessica eagerly. "The roots of this kelp are on the wreck."

"Beautiful stuff to dive through,"

Jessica.

"There's no harm in it, Gurdy. Can't foul you up, because it tears like wet blotting paper. But it is going to be pretty dark down there."

"Oh, let it wait for another time, Jessica."

"No, I'm in a lovely glow and I'd rather have a plunge than not. Let's have your electric torch, Gurdy. It will keep going as long as I care to. The trouble is going to be finding something about the corvette to catch a turn on. We are directly over the wreck, I think. This little patch of kelp lifts up from it. We'll the line, Gurdy, so there will be no tug on it."

Doctor White picked up the coil of new flag halloward stuff and sussed it overboard. Jessica stood up, slipped off her long woolen gown and taking the end of the line threw a loose bowline hitch in it and slipped her gleaming arm through the bight.

"Well, here goes, Gurdy—" She fixed the rim of her rubber bathing up securely under her. She took a few deep, rapid breaths more thoroughly to clear her blood. Then, filling moderately, she kissed her anxious doctor and was first, like the sea otter, to suggest, and more of a commotion. Doctor White leaned over the side of the boat, paying out the line vainly to follow down the downward current. The kelp fronds eddied and spread out what was underneath the coils of the line strung a circular spring street. A few bubbles came gyrating.

Then all at once there was a blinding down the bright blur of light through a curve with wavy lines from each stroke of the vigorous movement. Doctor White could see that was described, but the abundance of submarine vegetation made it impossible to see the doctor, he was holding the torch.

It was weird, yet exciting. Doctor White could see that was described, but the abundance of submarine vegetation made it impossible to see the doctor, he was holding the torch.

Doctor White could see that was described, but the abundance of submarine vegetation made it impossible to see the doctor, he was holding the torch.

The doctor wished that the man had come a little earlier or a little later. It annoyed him to be found apparently in the act of employing his beautiful ward, Capt. Warren Poole's daughter, as one might make use of a Kanaka pearl diver.

Doctor White was annoyed at the interruption. But as his experienced eyes swept over the details of the boat assembling out of the fog, this momentary vexation gave place to astonished chagrin, to dismay. Here was not their belated diver, nor even the De Corlays, nor Tom. It was a heavy yawl-rigged semi-cabin cruiser. As it forged slowly down on them, swinging off a little, the doctor discovered a small French flag flying from the mizzen truck.

The significance of this was very evident. No boat hailing from a neighboring French possession, especially Miquelon Island, of which the commerce now deeply interested the United States revenue service, was going to advertise her nationality unless she felt herself to be a virtuous craft and entitled to the protection of her flag. This could be no other than that Sebastian described as a scoundrel by Jessica and Robert, and now come to have a go at the Fourquet!

In the shock of this forbidding complication Jessica sat and stared at the boat as it drifted slowly up to them. Three men were in her cockpit, one of them holding the heavy, old-fashioned tiller. This would be Sebastian, the doctor thought, his fists clenching, and the fellow looked indeed the sort that the girl and Robert had described.

His face looked intelligent and alert, less stealthily than scheming and merciless rather than of the type that goes with slinking treachery. There was a sort of Tartar suggestion about the wide cheekbones, hooked nose, square angled jaw and narrow, pointed chin. Utterly ignoring Doctor White and Jessica, he ordered one of the men to let go the anchor.

Doctor White raised himself a little in the boat. "You are too late," he said in a crisp, authoritative voice. "I've got a line fast to this wreck and I claim the salvage from her."

Sebastian utterly ignored this statement. So far as concerned himself and his immediate operations the elderly gentleman and girl in the Whitehall rowboat might not have been there at all. The swarthy, stolid youth who had gone forward cleared the turns of chain cable from the winch and let go the anchor.

Jessica, as if awakening from a trance, whipped up her gown and enveloped her dripping body in its folds. Sebastian stepped nimbly forward to the well deck of the boat and threw a tarpaulin from some-thing placed there. Doctor White saw this to be a diver's air pump.

The third man, who had gone into the cuddy aft, came out with his arms full of the helmet and other gear. The youth forward stopped the cable, then took off his oilskin overcoat. The two other men did likewise, then carried on briskly their preparations.

During these rapid evolutions not one of them so much as threw a glance at the rowboat and the pair aboard it, almost alongside.

"Are we going to stand for this, Gurdy? I'm afraid of that—that man—I really wouldn't care to elope with him, the—the way he'd do it!"

Doctor White glanced at Jessica and shook his head. He had been watching silently the rapid preparations going on aboard the vessel. Jessica shivered a little, but not from cold, because her woolen gown was warm and heavy, and the night chill had by this time left the air while the sun, trying to break its way through the stuffy fog, gave in a muggy warmth that promised a little later to make a hot, stuffy day. The shiver was one of nervous tension and expectation, due to something in her guardian's silent waiting.

At the end of several minutes this began to tell on Sebastian's nerves. The strain of Indian blood that first had motivated his grim determination was unequal to the support of it when flung back at him in so unexpected a way. Sebastian began to breathe the lurid curses at his men for their slowness, and then under his black eyebrows he also more frequent malevolent glances at the calmly vigilant watcher in the rowboat.

Then all at once, the hostile principles in his cosmos fetched away from their container, blew out the plug of it, so to speak. He had picked up the helmet and seemed about to try it on when, glancing at the rowboat, he flung it down on deck again and strode to the main rigging, seizing a shroud in one grimy hand.

"What you want?" he snarled. "Why don't you clear out 'bout your business? What you think you gain do?"

Doctor White did not move a muscle. He neither smiled nor frowned, but continued to regard the furious Sebastian as if he had been a violent inmate of an institution for the criminally insane. Jessica's heart beat a little faster, but she too preserved her disdained calm. Sebastian seized the other shroud and shook both parts enraged, like a great ape might tug at the bars of his cage.

"I know you, mister," he snarled. "I see dem French officers go along your house. You think you find out what dey lookin' for and beat 'em. You think you play 'em one lousy trick. I fool you, by dam!"

This frenzied outburst brought no more response than before. Doctor White took out his watch, glanced at it, then returned to his fixed contemplation of Sebastian. Wheeling from the rigging Sebastian picked up the helmet again, half raised it, then scowled across at Doctor White. A curious indecision seemed to possess the man. Doctor White, as if observing it, half turned in his seat and, drawing in the line that anchored the boat to the wreck until it led nearly to an angle of eight degrees, caught a turn of it through the ringbolt.

Then all at once the fog that had obscured his motive from Jessica's mind cleared as the sea fog that enveloped them seemed almost ready to do under the hot rays of the mounting sun. She suddenly was able to appreciate the reason for Sebastian's fury; the man was afraid to go down while this unknown quantity of a doctor was alongside in a rowboat. And ever going down, he would never dare loose the doctor's line with that tell tale tension on it.

As Sebastian could not help but see the situation, there was this in feral doctor, possessed no doubt of all his cult's coldbloodedness, claiming the wreck by virtue of his having got a line fast to it, and now waiting calmly for Sebastian to submerge himself for the taking of measures that might result in a shortage of free air.

Viewed from this angle, it was by no means an attractive proposition for the diver. If that girl were amphibian enough to take a line down and make it fast to some part of the wreck, then it would not tax her resources greatly to slip overboard with a knife and gash his all-pipe and holding line.

Here was the coil in which Sebastian found himself, and it left him to take his choice of three courses, none of which he admired. The first was to go ahead and dive and take a chance on what might happen. The second was to call the bet a dead loss because of his delay in playing it. The third most appealed to the savage nature of the man, to seize and destroy and obliterate all trace of these two in the rowboat who seemed all set to blast the success of his venture.

If Sebastian's present errand had been run-running, Doctor White would not have taken such a chance. Being what it was, he did not believe that there were any firearms aboard the boat, because Sebastian knew that he might expect a minute overhauling at any time, as long as his suspicious-looking craft was in Yankee waters, and he would be clever enough to avoid the slightest evidence against him of preparation for offensive or defensive action.

But the doctor's intuitions were marvelously keen and swift, and as Sebastian was standing glaring at them across that perilously short space of separate water the doctor received such an impact of murderous intention as to shatter his psychology, or more properly, to stimulate it. It was borne in upon him instantly that his estimates had been faulty, and in a surge of horror he realized how easy it would be for this hot-headed desperado to whip out a gun, fire point blank at Jessica and himself, then sink their bodies with the boat, made fast to a few plugs of iron ballast. The chances were strong that no one ever would know.

The doctor acted in swift obedience to his impulse. He jerked out the slip hitch that he had caught through the ringbolt with the line threw overboard the buoy he previously had attached to the end of it, whittled to the after thwart and grabbed the bars. As he did so, Sebastian, as if galvanized into sudden action, pitched into the cabin of the cruiser. Like any other savage beast of primal instinct, his ferocity was inflamed by the startled flight of a quarry that had lured him boldly up to this moment. No doubt Doctor White was correct in his perception of a murderous assault on the verge of its discharge, and it is fairly certain that his anticipation of it was all that saved the lives of Jessica and himself.

That—and the fact that Sebastian's movements were clogged by the leaden soles of his diving outfit. When he plunged out on deck again, snarling with rage at his indecision and waving a big automatic pistol, the doctor had come near to establishing a rowing record for one hundred yards single sculls in a badly trimmed Whitehall boat, and presented a poor target in the fog.

Sebastian, although perceiving that he probably had missed his coup even then might have trusted to good marksmanship to retrieve it. But as he steadied himself to ascertain how big the target looked against his sights the sound of a motor boat's exhaust pulsed on his ear drums. Caution gripped him, and the reflection that so far he had actually committed no overt act of violence. He lowered his weapon and peered into the fog.

Jessica also had heard the approaching boat. So likewise had Doctor White, but not until he saw dimly through the thinning mist that Sebastian's arm had fallen to his side did he rest upon his oars, panting.

"That," said he to Jessica, "was a pretty close call."

"How did you guess what he was up to, Gurdy?"

"Call it radio telepathy. The wavelengths hereabouts are equal, and the messages of international code. Who is that coming? You know the bark of all these boats."

"Ed Hammond's—Tom," said Jessica, and added fiercely. "If Tom sinks that longgarou that tried to murder us—I'll marry him. I will if I have to make a stake for him, myself!" And then, as if realizing that a swift tongue had betrayed an innermost, secret thought, she blushed a rosy hue which even the mantling fog could not obscure.

CHAPTER VII

TO FOLLOW briefly the oblique movements of Dave MacFarlane's diver, Mike Castello, the night before, and after his departure from Friendship. Mike was a steady, reliable Portuguese who was thrifty to a fault—that same being the higher distillation of thrift, which is avarice.

Mike had got told of some liquor at a bargain, and it struck him that here was a good chance to dispose of it at a profit. New Harbor was not much out of his course around Pemaquid point, and Mike knew that there were just then several Portuguese mackerel boats fishing out of that port. He decided to duck in, dispose of his wares and proceed upon his voyage.

This little trading venture met with gratifying, but limited success. There was not enough ready cash in the foreign crowd to pay for the whole lot, so Mike decided to dispose of the remainder as a market offered.

Then, just as he was about to put out on the last lap of his voyage, a French Canadian from a Miquelon boat that had blown in there came over to find out what all the joy was about. He bought a quart of it, paying from a bag roll of money that he dragged from some recess of his sash and that left a hollow until replaced.

He was the "patron," it appeared, and on learning that Mike was bound on around the point from Pemaquid, to do a diving job for Doctor White, a sub boat or something, the Miquelon skipper asked Mike for a ride around there with him, saying that he wanted to get a new stuffing box for his ship's tall shaft at Boothbay Harbor the next morning; and that a friendly lift would save him running around to East Boothbay in his own boat.

What Sebastian, for he was the "patron," really wanted, of course, was the chance to tamper a bit with the diving gear heaped up in the forward part of the cabin. He had seen the De Corlays leaving Whale Island that afternoon, concluding, naturally, that Doctor White had offered them aid in their endeavor and had looked up a diver for them.

With true sailor hospitality, Mike not only offered to set him on his way, but put a spare bunk at his disposal for the night.

It may therefore be understood how thoroughly the skids were greased for the launching of Tim and Robert into a cross chop of troubled waters. Mike, his thrift loosened by the practical demonstration that his wares were wholesome, had gone below to serve himself another little nip just when Tom's launch passed them. So Sebastian was steering the vessel. His keen eyes sighted her white side, and followed her as she made her turn to fall in astern of him.

Sebastian could not guess just what was afoot, for radio telepathy has its limitations, but he scented trouble. The chances were he thought that they were being followed by an official launch on the lookout for bootleggers.

He had a frantic moment. They were towing a dory, and he was tempted to haul it up under the stern, drop into it and cast off. But he reckoned that he could not manage this without being detected from the following launch, when such action would be taken as a proof of guilt. Besides, there was the chance that their pursuers might not be officers at all, but gentry with a thirst, who on sighting the cruiser sneaking along the shore without lights, had made a good guess as to her possibilities. And for Sebastian to decamp would be for him to lose his chance of spiking his rival's guns.

Glancing astern, Sebastian saw that the launch was rapidly overhauling them, not more than a furlong away. He called to Mike and told him of the pickle, then advised the jettison of the incriminating evidence. But Mike's thrift flared up at this idea.

Nevertheless he was nervous. Telling Sebastian to haul the dory alongside, Mike ducked below, lugged out the whisky case and lowering it into the dory threw over it a worn old sail that served as a coverlet when he slept aboard. The darkness was opaque enough to prevent the discovery of this maneuver from the distance of the following boat.

Woman Was Originator of Father's Day Observance

Mrs. John Bruce Dodd of Spokane, Wash., was the originator of Father's day. She began her movement back in 1910, as a tribute to her own father, William J. Smart, a G. A. R. veteran, who had reared his own motherless group alone. Mrs. Dodd drew up a petition addressed to the ministerial association of her home city urging such constructive teaching from the pulpit as would point out the importance of a father's place in the home.

Newspapers helped to launch the movement but did not treat the subject seriously. Congressman J. Hampton Moore of Pennsylvania and later Congressman Snell of New York introduced resolutions in congress to set aside a Father's day for a national observance, but nothing came of their efforts.

Then the National Grating Card association and the tobacco dealers of the nation came to the rescue. Their efforts made Father's day—the third Sunday in June—a day of nationwide observance.

Morning Action of the Bowels

The commonest ailment of the American people, and the one that causes the most serious sickness is constipation. While many remedies are recommended you may be absolutely sure that the old-fashioned remedy, "L. F." Atwood's Medicine, taken in small doses, and continued for several weeks, will correct this bowels action. 50c for 60 doses everywhere.
